WOMEN LEADERS MORE PEOPLE-FOCUSED AND EMPATHETIC THAN MALE COUNTERPARTS FINDS KPMG

Women leaders emerged as significantly more people-focused and empathetic than their male counterparts, with 64% of UAE women prioritizing investment in developing their workforce's skills and capabilities compared with a mere 24% for men, who are instead prioritizing buying new technology. This is according to the latest edition of the KPMG 2022 Women Business Leaders Outlook, which surveyed women leaders from 50 countries, including the UAE.

Three quarters of UAE women leaders (72%) also felt their organization has a responsibility to help with reskilling the workforce to avoid lay-offs, compared with 60% of men.

The survey found that UAE women leaders are reconfiguring and securing the supply chain, advancing digitalization, connectivity, and cyber security resilience as a top priority. This differed from the priorities outlined by UAE male CEOs, who cited digitalization as a top priority, followed by inflation-proofing capital and input costs, and improving the employee value proposition to attract and retain talent.

UAE women leaders are confident of their business prospects as they pursue aggressive M&A strategies, with 74% saying new partnerships will be critical to continue the rapid pace of digital transformation post pandemic.

More than half of the UAE women surveyed also felt their companies needed to be more transparent regarding equal pay. As many as 62% believe a lot more needs to be done to build gender diversity on boards and management levels, and 62% experienced stereotyping and bias in their day-to-day work. Encouragingly, the UAE Government is introducing sweeping measures to increase female representation in the C-suite, with recent studies showing a growth in female leadership in UAE boardrooms over the past two years. Women leaders bring a new dimension to the workforce with their empathy-driven management style and people-centric leadership.

Emilio Pera, Senior Partner, CEO-Elect at KPMG Lower Gulf said:

"The participation of women in the UAE government is amongst the highest in the world, reflecting the UAE's strong commitment in empowering women.

There is no doubt that women leaders bring a fresh perspective and invaluable insights to leadership positions in both the public and private sector."

Marketa Simkova, Partner and Head of People & Change at KPMG Lower Gulf said: "Women leaders bring a new dimension to the workforce with their empathy-driven management style and people-centric leadership. It is enormously encouraging to see that the UAE's women leaders are confident of their company's future growth prospects as they take on pandemic-induced challenges head-on.

They have also displayed pragmatism when it comes to technology and innovation, which will prove invaluable to business as they navigate the challenges that lie ahead."

Male and female leaders differ on ESG challenges, with 29% of expressing the most pressing was the lack of an accepted framework for measuring and disclosing ESG performance, compared to just 5% of men.

Encouragingly, all business leaders expressed a desire to tackle diversity issues two-thirds of both men and women. The UAE agreed that stakeholders continue to increasingly scrutinize companies' performance on ESG issues, including employee diversity and inclusion.

HER STYLE - FASHION

STYLISH WORK OUTFITS IDEA

Lady Lead Magazine May 2023

HER STYLE - FASHION

If your workplace is more casual, wear your shirt and pants with a pair of leather sneakers. If your workplace is more formal, tap into the menswear trend by donning a matching separates set, a pair of brogues, or loafers.

A midi skirt and a knit

An outfit for the office that you may wear time and time again is a jumper and midi skirt combination because it is timeless.

It's vital to consider proportions when putting this outfit together. A fitting knit will look wonderful with an A-line or voluminous skirt, or you can French tuck a thick knit into a narrower pencil skirt to create a sense of balance. Don't be afraid to experiment with different textures; for a stylish contrast, wear a ribbed knit with a faux-leather skirt.

A trouser suit

If you don't already have one, get a trouser suit as soon as possible because it is a necessity for business attire. Consider using minimalist-friendly shades of grey or beige for a modern take on a classic. They are much more adaptable than a standard black suit, looking great with anything from Breton t-shirts to satin shirts. The best part is that your blazer and pants may be worn separately for even more outfit possibilities, making it a wonderful purchase for those on a budget.

A shirt dress

A hardworking dress is a must-have for any decent work wardrobe, especially on days when you wake up late and have little time to choose what to wear.

The easiest option is a shirt dress; just throw one on and combine it with some sandals or knee-high boots for the ultimate in fuss-free dressing. By choosing a striking color or a utilitarian look, you can add interest to your clothing.

A blazer + midi dress

Want to make your favorite midi dress office appropriate? It's simple, add a blazer. Instantly smartening up any outfit, it's an easy way to elevate your look without having to invest in a whole new outfit. To ensure your blazer works with the maximum number of outfits, go for neutral tones in shades of black, grey or beige. And don't worry if you find yourself buying a new dress too, there are so many amazing options in the shops at the moment, we don't blame you. Our current favourite style? Boho style tiered maxis look great when contrasted with a smart blazer.

A jumpsuit

It's vital to consider the style when selecting a jumpsuit: if you frequently find yourself in meetings or in front of clients, a tailored cut will give you a put-together impression; alternatively, for a more casual atmosphere, try a utility design or a boiler-suit. Jumpsuits are fantastic since they need little effort to style; simply throw one on and pair it with your favorite court heels or sneakers for immediate chic.

Imagine you wake up on Monday morning, your alarm goes off for the third time, and you're reluctant to hit the snooze button again. It is time for me to get up. After a short shower, you've found yourself staring at your clothes spending precious time looking for an outfit to go into the office in, again. Yeah, all of us were there.

If this sounds similar, do not worry; I have seven straightforward clothing combinations that will make dressed for work seem like no effort at all. Prepare for all the inspiration you'll need for stress-free boss-level clothing...

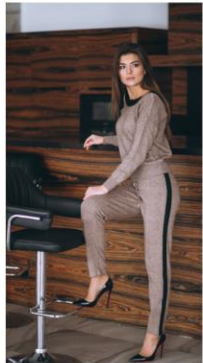

A Shirt and wide-leg pants

Choose straightforward separates like a shirt and wide-leg pants for a classic office outfit that will always be on point. For warmer days, lighter materials like linen and cotton are ideal, but since it's still rather chilly outside, use heavier materials for added coziness.

A Slip skirt & Blazer

You need an outfit that can be easily changed for both dinner and drinks if you intend to go out after work. Whatever the day brings, a jacket, cami, and slip skirt are the ideal items.

When it's time for cocktail hour, you may take the blazer off or throw it over your shoulders for more glitz. A blazer will give your ensemble a polished look for the office. Finish with flat shoes so you can make it to the meeting on time and dance the night away.

Interview

Equal-opportunity culture is smart

Interview with Field Marketing Manager at Infoblox : Ranim Atour

I believe that building an equal-opportunity culture is not just the right thing to do, it is also the smart thing to do. There is also a need for continuous efforts to change some stereotypes, and women must continue to challenge the status quo. Cybersecurity is very exciting, and you can easily get interested in it once you get a deep dive. It is a hyper-growth field that expands to different verticals and progresses along the way.

The absence of women involved in STEM, science, technology, engineering and mathematics, is a concern in many countries. From what I have seen over the past seven years in META region, many organisations are adopting the modern mindset that emphasizes bringing fairness to the game. This ensures society's representation is accurate in the work world, particularly in the cybersecurity space.

Dream environment

My ideal work environment is one that centres around working as a team and enforces a positive work culture, I cannot stress enough how lucky I am as Infoblox's corporate values align with that. At Infoblox I feel comfortable using my skills and knowledge while having the opportunity to learn from others. Flexibility for women with families is key and the hybrid work model helps in finding the right balance to maintain or advance a career.

Most Engaging

The marketing career path, especially in cybersecurity, is tremendously motivating and rewarding. I love this industry and what I do, and I consider myself fortunate to have had the opportunity to live in different countries that gave me a huge cross-cultural background, which is needed to grow in today's world.

Most Challenging

The business environment can change quickly. The pandemic showed us just how fast the playing grounds can change in a matter of weeks. The pandemic accelerated both planned and unplanned IT modernisation across organisations to keep pace with hybrid work. It gave more space for creativity and showed the difference between a normal and successful marketer.

Her Journey

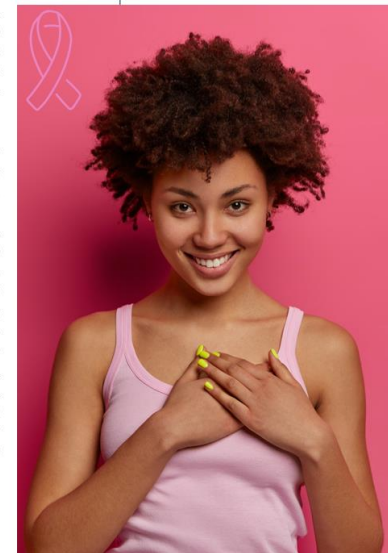

PRETTY IN PINK – A JOURNEY FROM PAIN TO AWARENESS

In a world filled with diverse cultures, beliefs, and traditions, the global community has come together to recognize October as "Breast Cancer Awareness Month." This collective effort speaks volumes about the power of raising awareness, and yet there remains an undeniable urgency to do more.

The Origin Story: The Pink Ribbon a demand for prevention and accountability Charlotte Haley, the Creator of the First (Peach) Breast Cancer Ribbon, started making them in the 1990s, at the age of 68. Haley, who had battled breast cancer, first began hand-making peach breast cancer ribbons in her dining room. To each packet of five ribbons, she attached a postcard that read: "The National Cancer Institute's annual budget is $1.8 billion, only 5 percent goes for cancer prevention. Help us wake up legislators and America by wearing this ribbon." Her ribbons were a call to action: a demand for prevention of this disease and greater accountability. Later in October 1992, cosmetics giant Estée Lauder shared the pink ribbon—a new symbol of hope and strength for those facing breast cancer—through its nationwide cosmetics counters for the first time.

How far have we progressed since 1991?

The harsh reality of breast cancer's impact on our world is best articulated by the World Health Organization (WHO), whose data reveals that breast cancer claimed the lives of 685,000 individuals worldwide in the year 2020 alone. These numbers, while shocking, can often feel insignificant to many of us. It's all too easy to fall victim to misconceptions, allowing fear or procrastination to hinder us from taking proactive steps, such as undergoing regular screening tests. Despite the availabilities of numerous centers offering screenings for free – making them accessible to a wider audience, the reluctance to participate is yet to be challenged.

The fight is still on for a Pinker Tomorrow

After all is said and done, there remains one question, what is your responsibility, what's your role in society, and the changes you will bring. The life-changing decisions you make today to get the screening, nudge that friend who's been reluctant to visit the center, is rewarding and relieving. In today's age of technology and innovation, the approach to screening has changed dramatically making the process much easier and faster – what better way to take advantage than this.

SHERAA & SBWC Event offers valuable insights into women-led businesses in UAE

17 Views

SHERAA(Sharjah Entrepreneurship center), in collaboration with SBWC(Sharjah Business Women Council) and Female Fusion, organized an event on March 8th, 2023, to celebrate International Women's Day.

As part of the 'Sheraa Community Talk' initiative, the event which took place at the House of Wisdom in Sharjah, featured insightful speakers, interactive discussions, and networking opportunities aimed at helping women entrepreneurs build meaningful connections with other business owners.

The event entitled "Her Story: Celebrating Women Who Inspire" attracted women entrepreneurs from around the nation and gave attendees the opportunity to gain new insights and strategies for success as well as to celebrate the incredible achievements of women in business.

After a networking session where attendees had the opportunity to meet and connect with fellow business women, Iman Ben Chabab, Maryam Bin Al Shaikh and Jen Blandos, representing Sheraa, SBWC, and Female Fusion respectively, then introduced their organizations and welcomed the attendees.

The founders' one-minute spotlight was a unique segment of the event where nine entrepreneurs spoke about their newly found businesses and what they needed help with from the audience to support them. The session was facilitated by the three organizations who have also been instrumental in nurturing these nine founders and their emerging companies, and helped attendees understand the challenges faced by fellow entrepreneurs and how they could lend their support.

The highlight of the Women's Day event was the panel discussion which featured two speakers from Sheraa, SBWC, and two from Female Fusion who were all dynamic entrepreneurs from diverse industries. Yasmine El Mouallim, founder of Maternaly, passionately highlighted the crucial importance of maternal mental health and self-care material, and how her business seeks to fill the gaps in maternal mental health care, offering more focused support than generic social media and tool groups. Dr. Muna Aldabbab, founder of Halajary, shared her innovative vision of connecting people together and empowering women while fostering meaningful real-life relationships and supporting small businesses in local neighborhoods.

The discussion was further enlivened by Yara Bin Shakar, owner of Yara Bin Shakar Label and cofounder of House of 45, sharing her experience as a fashion designer committed to creating sustainable clothing, offering valuable tips for starting a business, and highlighting the importance of communicating one-on-one with the market. Any Asad, co-founder of Koolo Pkcs, captured the audience's attention with her innovative approach to providing healthier snacks for children, stressing the need to think outside the box and to adapt to changing market demands.

Pamela Lilburne, CEO & founder of Linen Obsession – which supplies department stores with top brands and has recently launched their first flagship store – expressed a strategic and analytical mindset advising the audience to focus on solving problems and build lasting relationships with clients. Finally, Ferial Lakhany, co-founder of Arabee, showcased her passion for education and data-driven strategy, sharing her experience creating an interactive learning platform for learning Arabic and collaborating with the UAE's Ministry of Education to improve the standard of Arabic in schools. Her customer-focused approach, design thinking, and remarkable growth over the past 5 years to 50,000+ children demonstrated how her planning had paid off.
